PW-320 Worship & Digital Media Year

This course explores the current ways digital media and worship intersect in global Christian communities. What are key concerns and practices of incorporating digital media in worship? How do various Christian communities exercise their conceptualizations of what worship is through the way they use digital media and vice versa? This course takes a decolonial approach to frame these conversations within histories of power and resource inequities. In addition to providing guiding concepts in order to historically contextualize the digital era and the contemporary landscape of media ecosystems, the seminar will also equip students to research current trends, provide opportunities to craft ministerial strategies for their respective worship settings, and take part in hands-on learning experiences.

RA-191 T.S. Eliot & the Search for God

This course explores the spiritual quest as depicted in the poems, plays, and essays of the twentieth century's greatest poet. From the spiritual desolation of "The Waste Land" to the Christian vision of time, eternity, incarnation, and redemption in "Four Quartets," Eliot maps the spiritual quest in prescient ways - engaging postmodern relativism and secularism; the struggle between faith and doubt; the desire for private revelation; and pluralism. Ultimately, Eliot discovers God in a sacramental faith grounded in the 'hints and guesses' of Incarnation. 'The rest,' as he writes in "The Dry Salvages," 'is prayer, observance, discipline, thought and action.' Students will closely read, analyze, and discuss Eliot's major works, exploring connections between his depiction of the spiritual quest and today's postmodern "seeker" culture. They will examine how poetry, in its use of metaphor, symbol, and analogy, functions as an alternate language for theology, pointing toward a revelation of love that ultimately exceeds our capacity for reason and analysis. Course work includes written essays, online reflections, in-class discussion, and participation in a dramatic reading of "The Waste Land" (no prior experience required).
